

Jones Environmental in Ireland

Jones Environmental are no strangers to the Irish Environmental market having been involved since 1998.

Janet Jones was instrumental in setting up ALcontrol Dublin which was then run by Ken Scally and Caitríona Lynch for many years.

Ken joined as Technical Director in August 2009 and is based in Galway, spending about a third of his time here at the laboratory and the other two thirds looking after our Irish client base, offering both technical advice and logistical solutions. Unfortunately Caitríona decided on a career in teaching, which was a great loss to the industry.

Jones Environmental Laboratory was set up in June 2007 by Jim Jones, who was Technical Director at ALcontrol for 35 years and Janet Jones who was Commercial Manager at ALcontrol for 18 years. We operate from a large purpose built laboratory in North Wales, and over 25% of our current work comes from Ireland.

We offer a full range of analyses covering all routine landfill requirements as well as specialising in fuel spill analysis and organic forensic analysis.

We can invoice work in both Euros and Sterling and all rates include courier costs and disposal charges. Ken has a large supply of sample containers in Galway which are distributed either by Ken or by local Irish couriers, with sample collections being made by Ken, local couriers or DHL depending on location for delivery back to us in Wales the following morning.

We have reciprocal arrangements with several Irish laboratories for time dependent analyses such as microbiological analyses and BOD, again depending on location.
